Making Magic Happen

By K. Flanigan
PRESTON CITY

Although only one candidate for the state party positions was put forward by Preston at the party conventions Monday night, Preston delegates from each party found other candidates to passionately support. After the conventions, the citizens of Preston City were excited to finally discover the city election results, and the elections of Nicole as Mayor and Anne as Sheriff were well-received. These girls quickly stepped into their new roles, leading several city sessions on Tuesday to make decisions about taxing, decorations, and spirit chants. The Prestonians have also continued their supremacy over early dismissal from meetings on Iler Field, which has been no surprise given the fact that these girls are not only motivated, motivated, and downright dedicated, but also Preston smooth.

Ready to Rock and Roll

By M. Wills
RANDOLPH CITY

Nominations have been placed, campaign posters have been created, ballots have been formed and votes have been tallied and the week has just started. The rockin' city of Randolph has been completely enveloped in creating the city charter to decorating more of our city with the Wall of Fame. Randolph Rockstars have been on the ball so far and continue to represent throughout both conventions. Keep your ears and eyes open for the "Rebel Yells" and bright red stars that can be seen coming from the rockin' city of Randolph.

How the West Was Fun

By K. Upadhyaya
WILSON CITY

Early Tuesday morning, the wild cowgirls of Wilson City arose to embrace their new day, greeted by their fearless new sheriff. Tapping into their creativity, the newly sworn in elected officials, appointed officials, and citizens replaced the blasé job titles with names that conveyed the ways of the west: Director of Indian-Cowgirl Relations, Outhouse Inspector, and Bucking Bronco/Rattlesnake Wrangler. After the contentious distribution of city jobs and drawing up of a city charter, the cowgirls focused on making more western flair for their floor, including an expansive dessert that stretches across the baseboard of the city's hallway. Making plans to "caucus up a storm," the Wilson City cowgirls also excitedly prepared for the final Federalist and Nationalist Party Conventions.

Rawr!

By L. Lambert
DRAPER CITY

Those Dragons were on fire again today! They started off the morning strong by raising the flag at the morning ceremony, and kept it going with lots of pep and spirit to try to beat out the other cities! At the city meetings, Mayor Leah, along with the Sheriff Hillary, City Counsel members, and the other offices were sworn in, and the Dragons collaborated to come up with cute ordinances to keep our city running smoothly! As city decorations start going up, it's obvious the Draper ladies aren't going to let their fire be put out!

'Classy' Clarks start with a bang!

By N. Jallah
CLARK CITY

The "Classy" Clark city girls wasted no time in getting there city started of with a bang. While the Legislators were meeting, Mayor Katherine and members of the city council got together with the citizens of Clark to appoint many different city officials. The Clark City charter and the Clark City area was tackled and improved step by step. The Lieutenant governor's speech on empathy, and the way the "Classy" Clarkians worked together to decorate their City made them ready to attack any problems they might arrive to in the future.

Mims

computers, which operate at high speeds and have seemingly endless memory space. Mims noted that the technological revolution truly started 1991, adding, "it's fascinating that your life will be perfectly corresponding to the technological revolution." Mims emphasized this idea, relaying the idea that technology has opened endless doors for our generation.

When asked by Wilson City's Kendra whether he thinks technology's rising dominance in society will ultimately be a good or bad thing, Mims replied with what he laughingly referred to later as a typical lawyer's answer: "Yes and no." Elaborating, he recognized the efficiency and usefulness of technology in everyday life and the professional world. However, he also recognized the downsides of a world controlled by and dependant upon technology, briefly noting the dangers of fraudulent and sexually exploitive material found on the internet.

Mostly expecting a simple lecture on Virginia's legal system, the delegates of Girls State left the William C. Mims assembly having learned about more than just laws and legal process. The insightful content of Mims' speech conveyed messages that encouraged us to seize opportunities and to create our own success by disregarding objective terms like "the best" and "the brightest" that conventionalize us. And of course, he also impressed us by saying, more than once, that he had shaken the hand of the successful funk-rock artist Dave Matthews.
